The University of California

The California Golden Bears' football team comes from the Berkeley campus of the University of California, a campus that has had its share of publicity in recent years due to student disturbances.

But the lasting fame of the campus comes from its top ranked faculty and their research achievements.

Established in 1868, the campus has played a major role in helping California become one of the most prosperous states. From its very beginning, through research help to agriculture and industry, the University of California has played a vital role in the state's growth.

The campus is located on some 200 acres of gently sloping land just across the bay from the city of San Francisco. A wealth of carefully landscaped glades and groves of trees make the campus appear very much like a park, despite the numerous large buildings necessary to the education of 28,000 students, and for the use of the 15,000 faculty and staff.

Among the research achievements of the school's faculty are the invention of the cyclotron, isolation of the first human polio virus, first application of nuclear isotopes for use in medical research and therapy, discovery of six of the known hormones from the anterior lobe of the pituitary gland, and the first artificial synthesis of ACTH, used in the treatment of arthritis.

On the hill above the campus is the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory where many of the Berkeley faculty do nuclear research.

Eleven members of the Berkeley faculty have received Nobel Prizes for physics or chemistry, and 59 are members of the National Academy of Sciences.

The heart of any campus is its library, and the four million volume collection at Berkeley has been ranked just behind the famous Harvard Library as a research facility.

The campus also serves as a center for the arts in the San Francisco Bay Area, with its new Zellerbach Auditorium and Playhouse attracting leading international drama, dance, and musical groups, and its new University Art Museum quickly becoming a major showplace for paintings and sculpture.

As a vital place for learning, discovery, and expression in the arts and social sciences, Berkeley is truly one of the world's foremost educational institutions.

This Is The Ohio State University

Administration Building on the Ohio State University campus houses the university's administrative and staff offices.

The Ohio State University, having observed its centennial during 1970, is one of 69 land-grant institutions of higher learning in the nation established under the federal Morrill Act signed by President Lincoln in 1862.

The act granted tracts of public land to the states for general sale, with proceeds pledged to finance new colleges. Ohio State was founded with such funds in 1870 and was known as The Ohio Agricultural and Mechanical College. Classes began in 1873, but it was 1878 before the present university name was adopted.

Ohio State is governed by a nine-member Board of Trustees. One member is appointed each year by the governor of Ohio for a nine-year term.

The largest university in Ohio, Ohio State has the 13th largest total enrollment among U.S. universities. Some 48,000 students are enrolled for the autumn quarter on the Columbus campus and several thousand additional at four regional campuses. As the state's main center of graduate and professional education, the university has more than 10,000 students in the Graduate School and professional colleges.

The university offers more than 250 programs of study and approximately 5,000 courses taught by some 5,700 faculty and instructional staff members. Nearly 80 per cent of the faculty hold doctoral degrees.

Within the university there are 16 colleges: Administrative Science, Agriculture and Home Economics, The Arts, Biological Sciences, Education, Engineering, Humanities, Mathematics and Physical Sciences, Social and Behavioral Sciences, University College, Dentistry, Law, Medicine, Optometry, Pharmacy and Veterinary Medicine.

There are 10 schools: Social Work, Home Economics, Natural Resources, Music, Architecture, Journalism, Allied Medical Professions, Nursing; Health, Physical Education and Recreation; and the Graduate School.

Work toward master's degrees in 101 areas, and 79 offer the doctor of philosophy degree. Ohio State ranks eighth in the nation in the number of doctorates conferred during the past decade.

The university has operated on a four-quarter calendar since 1921.

Chief administrator of this multi-million dollar establishment is Dr. Novice G. Fawcett, who became Ohio State's eighth president in 1956.

The university site covers 3,283 acres. The East Campus is 2-1/2 miles from the downtown business district of Columbus. Approximately one million people live in the metropolitan area. Ohio State also offers undergraduate instruction at four regional campuses in Mansfield, Lima, Marion and Newark, and at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Dayton.

Ohio State has some 380 buildings, including 27 residence halls. Ten of these house men, 14 are for women, and there are three co-educational towers. Special buildings of note are the Ohio Union, Mershon Auditorium, Ohio Stadium, Thompson Memorial Library and Lincoln and Morrill Towers. About 1,080 acres at the Columbus campus are used for agricultural teaching and research. There are also a 245-acre airport, two 18-hole golf courses, two indoor swimming pools and an indoor ice skating rink.

The University Library is a depository for federal documents and receives United Nations documents. Along with its 25 departmental libraries, it holds 2.3 million volumes and is one of the largest libraries in the country.

BIG TEN FOOTBALL TROPHIES

Gridiron Rivals Battle Annually for Jugs, Buckets, Tomahawks, Spittoons, Turtles and Porkers

By Walt Paulison

(Mr. Paulison served as Sports Information Director at Northwestern from 1926 until retirement in 1969)

Numerous are the trophies that Big Ten football teams battle for each fall in rivalries that frequently have not been limited to the heated struggles on the gridiron.

Many are the instances in which students raided rival campuses in the stealth of night to appropriate the coveted trophies and carry them off while frenzied searches were made for their recovery. Fortunately, the missing trophies have eventually turned up and been returned to their rightful possessors.

Of all the trophies now in competition, none quite matches the tradition attached to the Little Brown Jug that annually goes to the winner of the Michigan-Minnesota game.

Perhaps it is because the unprepossessing five-gallon jug is the oldest of all the trophies or because of the circumstances surrounding its origin — whatever the reason, the Little Brown Jug has come to be America's most famous football trophy.

On Oct. 31, 1903, an unbeaten, untied and, yes, unscored upon Michigan team journeyed to Minnesota to meet a Gopher team possessing identical credentials. After 60 minutes of furious struggle, the two teams left the field in a 6-6 deadlock.

In those days, visiting teams brought along their own drinking water on the theory that a change in water might prove harmful. When the Wolverines returned to Ann Arbor after the game, it was discovered that their water jug had been left behind.

When a Michigan official inquired after the jug, his Minnesota counterpart replied in essence, "Yes, we have your jug. If you want it, come and get it!" There could be no mistaking the clear challenge, although it wasn't until six years later that the teams were to meet again.

The 1909 game was also played in Minneapolis, and sure enough, there on the sidelines was Michigan's water jug. The Wolverines won the game 15-6 and this time the jug accompanied the victorious team back to Ann Arbor where it was painted in the colors of the two schools and the score inscribed. From that time on, the Little Brown Jug is placed on the sidelines at each Michigan-Minnesota game to be claimed by the victor.

BIG TEN FOOTBALL TROPHIES

Another tradition steeped trophy is the Old Oaken Bucket for which Indiana and Purdue football teams have been contending since 1925, when it was placed in competition by Chicago alumni of the two schools. The bucket, said to be well over 100 years old, was found in a well on an Indiana farm. Legend has it that the ancient wooden bucket was used by Morgan's Raiders to quench their thirst during a sortie into Hoosierland during the Civil War.

Also in 1925, the junior class honorary societies at Ohio State and Illinois came up with a live turtle — dubbed "Illibuck" to combine both school names — for the winner of the annual Buckeye-Illini game. The donors envisioned a durable symbol, based on the expected long life span of the turtle. Unfortunately, "Illibuck" died two years later, and a wooden replica now serves in his place.

A wager between Minnesota Governor Floyd Olson and Iowa Governor Clyde Herring of a prize pig on the outcome of the 1935 Hawkeye-Gopher game resulted in the Floyd of Rosedale trophy. Tension between students and alumni of the two schools had been running high for several years and the wager was devised to help patch things up.

After Iowa lost the game, Governor Herring paid off with a full-blooded champion named Floyd of Rosedale. The blue-blooded porker became the model for a bronze statue with a sash around the middle for team scores.

A cannon has been the symbol of Purdue and Illinois rivalry since 1943, but the history of the cannon dates back to 1905 when Purdue students took the weapon to Champaign to fire in celebration of a Purdue victory.

Although the Boilermakers won the game, the cannon was never fired and it was later found by Illinois student Quincy Hall and some Delta Upsilon fraternity brothers. It remained in the fraternity house for several years until Hall took it to his farm. It gathered dust until Hall suggested it be used as a football trophy between the two schools when the rivalry was resumed in 1943 after a 12-year lapse.

The winner of the annual Northwestern-Illinois football game gains possession of a tomahawk which has been at stake since 1945 when it was introduced by the sports staff of Northwestern's student paper. When first established, the trophy was an authentic wooden Indian of the type that formerly graced the fronts of cigar stores. However, the old fellow, dubbed "Sweet Sioux," proved such a transportation problem that he was eventually replaced by the current Tomahawk.

Paul Bunyan, the legendary woodsman-lumberjack, was the inspiration for two Big Ten football trophies. In 1948, the Wisconsin "Y" Club originated the Paul Bunyan Axe to be awarded to the winner of the annual Wisconsin-Minnesota game. In 1953 Governor Mennen Williams of Michigan presented the Paul Bunyan Trophy to the winner of the Michigan-Michigan State game. The trophy consists of a four-foot wooden statue of the giant lumberjack astride an axe.

Michigan State's gridiron warriors also vie with their Indiana rivals for possession of the "Old Brass Spittoon" which was placed in competition in 1950 by the student bodies of the two schools. The ancient relic was found in an old Michigan trading post and is believed to have been around when the two schools were founded in the mid-1800's.

First Play On The Astroturf

Here is the first play on Ohio State University's new Astroturf, the opening kickoff to Iowa's Levi Mitchell by Buckeye Stan White. Mitchell returned the ball 18 yards but Iowa lost the ball on the next play to the Buckeyes, who romped over the Hawkeyes, 52-21.

As a Matter of Fact...

(Some interesting facts about Ohio State, presented by the Alumni Association)

■ Ohio State has been playing football since 1890, and has been a member of the Big Ten since 1913. The Buckeyes have been Conference champs 15 times and have won the national football crown four times, and last season shared possession of the MacArthur Bowl with Texas.

■ Ohio State has gone to the Rose Bowl six times, more than any other Big Ten team, and has won four games (1950, 1955, 1958 and 1969) in Pasadena. They lost the first time in 1921.

■ The Buckeyes have played arch-rivals Michigan 67 times, more than they've played anyone else. The series stands at 25 wins for Ohio State and 38 for Michigan, with four ties. Twenty-one of Michigan's victories came before 1935.

■ Ohio State's official alumni organization, The Ohio State University Association, is the second largest dues-paying alumni association in the nation, and the largest such organization in the Big Ten, with some 50,000 members.

■ Ohio Stadium, built through private donations by some 13,000 alumni and friends, was completed in 1922—after only 13 months of work powered mostly by horses and steam engines. A series of Ralph Fanning watercolors depicting the stadium construction is on display in Alumni House in the Center for Tomorrow, on Olentangy River Road, just across the river and north of the stadium. Stop by after the game.

■ The Ohio State University was founded as The Ohio Agricultural and Mechanical College in 1870 as a land grant college. The first class was composed of six men. Today the University has grown to well over 45,000 students in Columbus, one of the largest schools in the nation.

■ Woody Hayes has won more games and Big Ten titles (seven) than any other coach in the Conference since he came to Ohio State in 1951. At the beginning of the 1971 season, his record stood at 134 wins, 43 losses and seven ties.

■ The Ohio State Alumni Association coordinates an active alumni club program in many areas across the state and nation—probably with a chapter in your area. They'd like to get to know you.

■ Ohio State has had 52 All-Americans in 81 years of football, the first being Chic Harley and Bob Karch in 1916.

■ Some 9,000 Alumni Association members have become life members, assuring them membership benefits indefinitely without annual dues payments. Easy quarterly payments can be arranged.

■ Carroll C. Widdoes has the best won-lost percentage of the 19 coaches who have held the head football post at Ohio State. In his two seasons at Ohio State, 1944 and 1945, Widdoes won 16 and lost 2 for an .889 average.

■ Want to know more? Membership in the Alumni Association includes a subscription to The Ohio State University Monthly, the alumni magazine that will keep you in touch regularly with the University. Why not join today? Stop by Alumni House, while traffic clears, on your way home.

A GREAT RUNNER.

You expect a little car to be a good sprinter. Nimble, light on its feet, fine for short runs around town.

Vega is all that.

But what sets Vega apart is that it's one little car that's good on long runs too.

One reason is its relatively large 140-cubic-inch overhead cam engine. It can cruise comfortably at turnpike speeds without straining, and with power to spare.

Vega is built low to the ground, and wide, so it takes curves without a lot of lean and hangs onto a windy highway like it weighed a whole lot more.

The steering is easy. Yet firm and reassuring on straight stretches.

What we're saying is, for an economy car, Vega sure feels a lot like a sports car.

Get into one soon and see. It'll give you a good run for your money.

Great runner meets great runner. Former Heisman Trophy winner O.J. Simpson behind the wheel of a Vega Hatchback Coupe.

Buckle your seat and shoulder belts.
It's an idea you can live with.
